Antenna Installation

The RF module antenna must be installed inside the vehicle in the centre of the windshield, at least 9 cm (3 inches) below the roof liner with, depending on model, its “pole” pointing down or its antennas pointing horizontally. It is recommended to install the antenna so that it is “hidden” from the driver’s view by the rear-view mirror.

Peel off the tape on the RF module’s antenna and position the antenna on the windshield inside the vehicle.

Run the antenna cable between the roof and the roof liner, behind the left side “A” pillar trim and run it down under the driver’s dashboard.

⚠ Note: Some vehicles have a side-curtain airbag located in the left-side “A” pillar trim. It is very important to pass the antenna wire between the airbag and the actual metal of the “A” pillar to avoid obstructing the path of the airbag in the event of deployment.

Making the Proper Connections

1. Connect the antenna to the XL202 module using the antenna harness (#1 in the diagram).
2. Connect the bypass module to the 4-pin connector of the XL202 using the crossover D2D harness supplied with the XL202 (#2 in the diagram).
Note: Do NOT use the D2D cable supplied with the bypass module.
3. Connect the bypass module’s wires to the vehicle according to the firmware install guide.

⚠ DBALL: The RFTD feature must be turned ON.

* Model may vary. Check for correct bypass model on www.xpresskit.com.
